

Shanghai Airlines Overbooking Service Plan

I. Overbooking Principles

Shanghai Airlines employs sophisticated passenger no-show probability forecasting to engage in appropriate overbooking on certain flights to maximize the use of transportation resources and minimize waste. Shanghai Airlines will fully consider routes, flight schedules, times and connecting flights, and reasonably control the overbooking ratio of flights to avoid to the greatest extent possible the situation where passengers are denied boarding due to overbooking.

II. Information Disclosure and Procedure for Seeking Volunteers

When Shanghai Airlines has overbooked a flight, it will post “Flight Overbooking Notice” and “Volunteer Search Notice” for the corresponding flights at the check-in area, or contact passengers via phone, text messages or onsite consultation to inform them of overbooked flights, the carrier compensation plan, and passenger rights. Shanghai Airlines will solicit volunteers willing to switch to a different class, flight, or itinerary, accept an endorsement for another flight carrier, or a refund for the compensation offered. Shanghai Airlines will also inform the passengers of the compensation and service criteria.

III. Priority Boarding Rules

When the number of actual passengers exceeds the number of available seats due to overbooking, Shanghai Airlines will first solicit volunteers to take a later flight or voluntarily cancel their journey in accordance with the procedures specified in this plan. Should an insufficient number of passengers volunteer to cancel their trip, Shanghai Airlines will deny boarding to some passengers after initiating boarding in the following order:

1. Passengers on urgent official duties;
2. Passengers with special service needs (seniors, the infirm, sick, disabled, pregnant, and unaccompanied children) and their necessary companions arranged in advance with Shanghai Airlines;
3. First Class, Premium Business Class, and Business Class passengers;
4. Eastern Miles Platinum, Gold, and SkyTeam Elite Plus members;
5. Passengers who have already booked Shanghai Airlines connecting flights or have a very short time to make a connecting flight;
6. Eastern Miles Silver and other SkyTeam Elite members;
7. Passengers demonstrating special needs or urgency.

IV. Standards for Compensating Overbooking and Relevant Services

Shanghai Airlines will arrange seats for voluntary passengers or passengers denied boarding who decide to continue their journey on the earliest available flight in their respective class and provide reasonable compensation according to the fare, the distance of the flight, and the time being delayed in accordance with Section 3 of this Article.

1. Method of Compensating Overbooking

Compensation for overbooking may be paid in cash (electronic payment is acceptable).

2. Conditions for Compensating Overbooking

Volunteers and passengers denied boarding are eligible to receive compensation for overbooking provided they satisfy all conditions below:

2.1 Passengers have booked flights in the reservation system, including free tickets purchased with FFP mileage points, free tickets for sales incentives, or discounted tickets.

2.2 Passengers have completed check-in, or arrived at the designated check-in counters to check-in or wait for check-in before the cut-off time for check-in at airports.

2.3 Passengers possess valid travel documents.

2.4 No more passengers can be accepted in any class on the overbooked flight.

2.5 Passengers are not denied transportation under the provisions of the Shanghai Airlines Company Limited General Conditions for Transportation of Passenger and Baggage or within the scope of restricted passengers that Shanghai Airlines does not agree to carry.

3. Compensation Standards

Shanghai Airlines will provide a fixed amount of financial compensation to passengers denied boarding in accordance with the fare, distance of the original flight, and time spent waiting to transfer to another flight or for another flight to be endorsed.

4. Compensation Currency

In the context of this plan, cash is paid by Shanghai Airlines in the currency of the country or region where the overbooking or refusal of carriage occurs.

V. Following Services for Passengers Denied

Shanghai Airlines will provide the following services to voluntary passengers or passengers denied boarding listed in this plan:

1. Passengers will be given priority to board the earliest available flights in the following order:

1.1 Change to other direct flights of the same route operated by Shanghai Airlines;

1.2 Change to other non-direct flights of Shanghai Airlines;

1.3 If the conditions are met, the passenger can be transferred to a direct flight on the same route operated by another airline;

1.4 If the conditions are met, the passenger can be transferred to indirect flights operated by another airline.

2. Complimentary meals will be provided to passengers during meal times while waiting for a changed flight.

3. When the scheduled departure time of the alternative flight exceeds the actual departure time of the original flight by more than four hours or is a next-day flight, free accommodation and transportation will be provided to passengers.

4. If the conditions are met, the flight change can be handled as an involuntary change.

5. Handled as an involuntary refund.

6. Flight Overbooking Certificate will be provided to passengers upon request.

VI. Entry into Force and Amendments

1. This plan shall take effect from January 20, 2026.

2. This plan is an integral part of the Shanghai Airlines Company Limited General Conditions for Transportation of Passenger and Baggage and this plan should prevail for matters stipulated in this plan. Shanghai Airlines Company Limited General Conditions for Transportation of Passenger and Baggage shall prevail for matters not stipulated in this plan.
